EDUCATION

Who has o

THOUSANDS of students sit for HSC examinations each year in Mauritius. To be honest, I don't know the exact number. But I do know there are a lot of candidates. We compete against one another for the 'prestigious' state scholarship. Seven to eight years of work are examined at once. Should we complain about it, or should we say that things are the same all over the world? I don't know. But you see, dear readers, for someone who just got out of this same educational system, I am surely lost and unknowledgeable of the outside world. For some of you reading this article, it might just be about another student who missed the scholarship, ranting about the system, without having solutions. For others, they might agree with what I have to say, but will yet stay quiet.

When applying for universities abroad, it is funny how they say they need the recommendation of a school counsellor. At first, I remember asking my parents about who had this responsibility at school. Because we are one of the very few systems in the world, where a career adviser or school counsellor is practically only on paper. Have you ever read or heard about paper companies? Here in Mauritius, the school system, be it kindergarten, primary or secondary, exists only on paper. As an ex-student, I am not afraid to say that education does not take place. We learn how to earn marks, not the subjects at all. Some people would say I am bluffing – the new plans set up by the Ministry of Education seem rather solid and focused on personal development.
